

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1. A two compartment bag comprising, in combination:

a generally flat, rectangular bottom panel, first, second, third, and fourth adjacent side wall panels extending from and affixed to the bottom panel to form an enclosure with an open top, said first second, third and fourth wall panels foldable to form first and second separate parallel top closures parallel to the second and fourth opposed wall panels for the bag in combination with a connecting top panel segment comprised of an extension of the first and third panels joining the first and third opposed wall panels, and an internal panel generally parallel to the second and fourth wall panels and extending between the connecting top panel segment, the inside of the first and third wall panels and the bottom panel to form two separate internal sections of the bag enclosure, said second and fourth panels, connected respectively by a fastener mechanism to the first panel, top panel segment and third panel to form a first flexible opening bounded by the first panel, second panel, third panel and top segment and a second flexible opening bounded by the first panel, fourth panel, third panel and top segment.

2. The bag of claim 1 wherein the internal panel is attached to the bottom wall and side walls by releasable fastening devices.

3. The bag of claim 1 including a shoulder strap having opposite ends with fabric loops, a carabineer attached to each loop, and two fabric loops attached to the connecting segment, said carabiners attached to the fabric loops.
